The subject has long been a hobby of ours, and although we have not been in the habit riding it, we have far from-abandoned ! In polytoffact, if we ever had had any misgiv ings as to its feasibility, they would be partially hispelled, by the attompt which Messrs Rusiell & Co, are now making to provide whatfage for their river steamers. Our arguments are very simple. We will put the worst case possible-namely that of a ship arriving from London with a miscellaneous cargo. We will suppose that she goes alongside a wharf, and proceeds steadily with her discharge. Should there be boats waiting on the off side for certain goods, let the same be delivered accordingly, but should there be no bout, let them be delivered to the Morning Herald.

One of the Gentlemen alluded to is a member of a firm which has " Pekin" leaves for Swatow, invariably opposed everything in the way of Joint Stock associations from a notion I suppose that interests lay in that course, and the other, -well on the day before he voted, he was strongly in learn that he has since reverted the same view. The principle of limited Linbility is now at well understood in England that one would have thought that the good results which have accorned from its adoption there, would have been sufficient to induce those members of the Council who, not being members of large firms may be supposed to have only the public good to consult, to have given their votes in favour of the ordinance.
